MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: Conversation with Deputy SecDef Duncan,
8 November 1978

25X1

1. I presented the [] briefing. It was generally well received.

3. Deputy SecDef asked if Murphy could have the forthcoming Congressional justification book for the CIA. He understood we had agreed in the past to exchange copies of these books. I have some vague recollection of that and I think I may have made such a commitment. I told him there was real sensitivity because of the details of HUMINT, proprietaries and other things in the CIA book, but that I would look into it. He said that he had been told that Defense had given their Congressional justification books both to the IC Staff and to the CIA. At least he indicated he was told that the CIA had the Defense Congressional justification books. I'll need advice on this one, but I asked what Murphy's needs were and Charles Duncan said he really didn't know anything specific but he would ask Dan. I said perhaps we could provide him the information he needed without the whole book. Offhand, my reaction is to give him the book but one copy only and strictures on its release within Defense. Jim Taylor and [redacted], advise.

4. We talked about the space for the NITC in the Pentagon. He told me that Doc Cooke had said that [redacted] had agreed to the 7th corridor space for the bulk of his staff, the space for the emergency team working with the CCF, and that the issue in question was the space for [redacted] office which they were working on. He wanted to know if I agreed with this, as I had not agreed once before when I was told that it was a full agreement between our staffs. I told him I was not in full agreement with this. I still believe that the entire staff ought to be in the JCS area or it would get left out in the cold. However, if [redacted] agreed that moving his and Ted Shackley's offices into the NMIC area plus his emergency staff would give adequate interface, I thought I could go along with it. I also wanted a very modest office for myself, both to have a place to be private in the event that I came here in a crisis and that I thought my having a small office would benefit Defense because I would be more likely to come over and spend time here for instance between other meetings. We left it that Doc Cooke and [redacted] would continue to work on this one. I asked Secretary Duncan if he would see whether we could receive support from the JCS Registry so that we could avoid having to put three people onto registry duty. He thought that was certainly reasonable and would look into it.

5. We talked about the Defense Intelligence School. Defense is continuing to study the prospects of Dayton or Monterey.

We then talked about the probability of getting National Capital Planning Commission clearance, local residence clearance, etc. I said I really hadn't explored this because I didn't want to get anybody started prematurely. We agreed that we would get the Congressional representative from this district (Fisher?) and the three of us would sit down and talk about this at the earliest opportunity. I'd like to have OLC arrange such a meeting--perhaps a breakfast at Langley. I'd like to have [redacted] or someone review the figures I worked over once before from DDA about how many DIA people in different components and which ones should come to Langley--this came up when Duncan once talked about bringing a portion of the DIA out to Langley. I'd also appreciate a more detailed paper on just what clearances are required and from whom in order to do any building at Langley.

8. I alerted Secretary Duncan that I was sending a letter to Gene Tighe declining his request for 17,000 new compartmented clearances. I recognized that he had a problem but I thought these numbers could be accommodated by tightening their belts and doing a zero-based review as we have done in some instances.

STAT

10. We agreed on 14 December as our position for the NFIP review with the President.

11. I didn't need to get into MIGs on Cuba, nor did I get into briefing for the President.
